EUREKA – The star witness has jeopardized the trustworthiness of the state's case against a Lake County man accused of murdering a Eureka couple in a Fieldbrook driveway in September 2014.

Ironically, the witness, Shavonne Hammers, is also the alternative suspect in the defense narrative of the killings.

Granted immunity from prosecution in return for incriminating the defendant, Jason Michael Arreaga, 30, of Lucerne, Hammers arrived at court drunk last Thursday when the defendant's second trial began. The first one ended in a hung jury Oct. 23. Now a second mistrial may eventuate.

New airline offers flights to Portland

MAD RIVER UNION

MCKINLEYVILLE – Starting April 21, travelers will have a second airline option when flying in and out of the California Redwood Coast Humboldt County Airport (ACV).

Last week, Alaska-based PenAir announced it will offer two flights daily between Portland International Airport and Humboldt County's main airport in McKinleyville.

"We are thrilled to have PenAir coming to Humboldt County," said Public Works Director Tom Mattson in a press release. "Our community has made it clear that they want more flights to more destinations, and I'm confident that PenAir will do a great job offering quality air service to the people of our area. There are so many positive aspects to this news. I'm excited to see our community reap the benefits." Under the proposed flight schedule, PenAir will fly from Humboldt to Portland, with departure at 5:50 a.m. and arrival at 7:20 a.m. Then there will be a flight from Portland back to Humboldt, with departure at 9:20 a.m. and arrival at 10:50 a.m.

There will be another flight from Humboldt to Portland, with departure at 11:20 a.m. and arrival at 12:50 p.m. Then there's a Portland-to-Humboldt flight, departing at 6:30 p.m. and arriving at 8 p.m.

When PenAir starts its service April 21, it will mark the first time in five years that the airport has been served by more than one air-

ARCATA – In the 1950s TV series The Millionaire, John Beresford Tipton gave a million dollars each week to a person who was never to know their benefactor.

Arcata now has its own Tipton – an unknown soccer enthusiast who offered Arcata a new pick-up futsal court estimated to cost nearly a third of a million dollars, to be located amid the sports fields at the Arcata Community Center.

Last week, the Arcata City Council followed the recommendation of the Parks and Rec Committee, which first heard the proposal in January (Union, Jan. 20), to accept the unusual anonymous donation.

The offer, forwarded via Greenway Partners and the Humboldt Area Foundation, came with two conditions – that there be no reservations required and no fees charged, ever.

"This is a great project," said City Councilmember Mark Wheelley. "It is going to be a great facility for us all."

The council's vote was 4–1, with Councilmember Sofia Pereira dissenting. While lauding the project, she objected to the precedent-setting restriction on reservations "when we don't really know what the long-term ramifications of that would be."

Paul Swenson of the Mad

River Youth Soccer League thanked the council for approving the facility. "I really see this as a community-building facility," he said. "It represents something that's very special to a happy, healthy community."

Since the initial offer was tendered, the donor has added an endowment to cover ongoing maintenance costs.

The all-weather court will feature automatic lighting and a permanent surface made from green or low-impact materials. It will be open from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. each day, accessible via a walkway around the perimeter of the Community Park, allowing users to circumvent games in play on adjacent fields.

The other Shelley Mitchell.

Arcata, it turns out, has an embarrassment of Shelley Mitchell riches. While most towns struggle along with zero Shelley Mitchells, tiny Arcata boasts a two-woman set of them. This even though the odds of even one living in town our size are vanishingly small – just about 0.000017 or 1 in 58,000, based on census data.

If the entire United States, with 321,965,658 people, has just 107 Shelley Mitchells, why would Arcata, with a population of just 17,697, host two of them?

"Having two people with the same name in a small town is not surprising," said Chris Dugaw, professor of mathematics at Humboldt State. He's fascinated with probability, and noted that randomness is not evenly distributed. Statistical flukes such as Arcata's double-dose of Shelley Mitchells are actually quite likely in the grand scheme of things.

HUMBOLDT – The Board of Supervisors' next meeting on the county's General Plan Update won't be until Aug. 22, but intense behind the scenes work will continue as the update's environmental review is developed.

Supervisors discussed several items related to the update's closing phase at a Feb. 1 update hearing. Their first order of business was review of several late-arriving land use map change requests.

Supervisors agreed to take up the requests at one of their near-future regular meetings. They have accommodated landowners with map change requests even though they had previously announced that the time window for accepting them is closed.

The county will soon work on revising the update's Environmental Impact Report (EIR) and further changes won't be allowed. "There will be a very hard and fast deadline," said Planning Director Rob Wall.

Plaza bistro makes public offering

Kevin L. Hoover
MAD RIVER UNION

ARCATA – Café Brio wants you to have a share, and not just a hunk of your lunch partner's Quiche Forestière. The Plaza's premiere sidewalk bistro is offering shares for sale to investors at $100 each with a 10-share minimum.

The "direct public offering (DPO)" serves several goals. It will help the café retire old debt, pay its staff a living wage, build capital for a much-desired expansion plus kitchen upgrades, and put the business on a more sustainable footing for what founder Serge Scherbatskoy calls the "post-Serge era."

"I think we're the first DPO in this area," Scherbatskoy said. "We're trying to stay ahead of minimum wage and offer fair wages."

Begun as a sole proprietorship, Brio has restructured and is now both a "C corp" and a "B corp," which allows the share offering. Some 600 shares are available, with a "targeted return" of 3.5 percent.

Scherbatskoy said it's part of the "slow money" movement, a principled investment philosophy that emphasizes local and sustainable investments, particularly in food producers.

The share offering was announced at last week's Arcata Chamber of Commerce First Thursday mixer, which was hosted by Café Brio. But that very day, the first buy took place when a check arrived in the mail, sent from an investor who had noticed the offering at briobaking.com/invest.

The share offering will fund a dramatic expansion of the popular café, which will extend 12 feet northward to the Eighth Street sidewalk. That will allow upgrades to make both patrons and staff more comfortable. The number of tables will increase from 32 to 42, improving circulation.

The existing coffee bar will also be extended to better accommodate the café's beer and wine offerings.

Behind the scenes, the cramped kitchen will be renovated. Café Brio began life in 2007 as a bakery, and while it has expanded its menu, Scherbatskoy said "the space that cooks are working with is six burners, a countertop and an egg poacher." Smart new appliances will replace the overused vintage gear.

Architect Kash Boodjeh, who designed the Café Brio building, is designing the expansion plans. Café General Manager Tamra Tafoya said the comprehensive remodel will make for happier customers and staff alike.

In the field, delivery drivers now use paper and pen (and carbon paper!) to process orders. They'll switch to an error-minimizing handheld electronic unit for paperless delivery and invoicing.

Investors to buy the minimum of 10 $100 shares in February will get a complimentary bottle of wine with dinner. Large investors who buy in with more than $55,000 will be invited to a special farm-to-table dinner.

Meanwhile, Café Brio will host a launch party for its direct public offering Sunday, Feb. 28 from 5 to 7 p.m. The event will feature hors d'oeuvres, drinks and information for prospective investors.

WILSON'S WAY Third District supervisorial candidate Mike Wilson heralded the opening of his near-Plaza office last Thursday, Dec. 4, located in the Hunt Building at 838 Ninth St. in Arcata. Wilson said the downtown office was a step up from previous campaigns conducted from living rooms. Calling himself an "unashamed environmentalist," Wilson stressed the importance of planning and the "connectedness" of issues such as housing, transportation and human services to the environment. The Wilson campaign's next event is a barn dance at the Veterans Memorial Building Friday, Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. KLH | UNION

New name, renewed mission for CPP in 2016

ARCATA – The downtown reform group formerly known as the Community Pride Project has a new name, the same "CPP" initialism, the same mission, a number of accomplishments and ongoing projects, plus a fresh new wave of enthusiasm for 2016.

Rechristened "CommUnity Pride & Peace," the group met at the D Street Neighborhood Center Monday, Feb. 1. The renaming was because another Sacramento-based group with similar goals already uses the original name.

Attendees included downtown businesspeople, residents, Arcata's mayor, top city and Humboldt State officials and a supervisorial candidate.

Steve Geider noted that CPP organizes weekly downtown cleanups (Fridays at 1 p.m.), a Plaza Play Group (Sundays at 11 a.m.), and has joined forces with Stand for Peace, the group that holds vigil on the Plaza (Friday evenings at 5:30 p.m.).

The group has named a Board of Directors and is seeking nonprofit status. Its five breakout teams are pushing forward with their agendas. A few are hampered by lack of volunteers.

"We need more people," said

Sasha Elizabeth. "We want to bring our community together and work as a team."

Ken Hamik said he and Stephen Seer Snively are mounting an outreach effort, including tabling at Humboldt State, an event calendar and online resources.

The Safety and Support team is finding cooperation with Plaza bartenders and others to help tame the always-burly Ninth Street scene. One suggestion was to form a "peaceful nonviolent safety group" to monitor conditions and contact police as problems erupt.

Police Chief Tom Chapman urged citizens never to hesitate to call police. "If you don't call, it's someone else's problem," he said.

The Environmental team needs more participation. But it is managing to mount the Friday downtown cleanups, with city support.

The Human Services team is looking at a possible community potluck, and hopes to help improve homeless services. "They are part of our community," said Koa Shea.

Mayor Paul Pitino said homeless people are making an effort to clean up the streets as well, and have "made a change on their side."

University Police Chief Donn Peterson said local law enforcement ought to be viewed as "peace officers," as keeping peace is their training and agenda. "We're not looking to solve problems with jail, handcuffs and arrests," he said.

The CPP is seeking volunteers and entertainment for a Friday, March 18 fundraising event at the D Street Neighborhood Center. Contact CPP through its Facebook page.

divided by 2 equals 156,583,056 ways to select a pair of people in Arcata," Dugaw said. "Chances are a few of them will have the same name, and there is a good chance the name is uncommon like Shelley Mitchell."

While the two Shelleys' lives frequently and confusingly cross paths in tiny Arcata, they had never actually set eyes on each other before a Jan. 27 meeting at the Union's office. There, they compared notes, exchanged stories and took note of uncanny similarities as well as differences. Both had tales of mixed-up prescriptions, video rentals, newspaper subscriptions, phone messages and even a polling place glitch. Each has learned to minimize confusion by using their differing middle initials.

"I wrote a letter to the editor, and the next week you answered and said, 'I am not that Shelley Mitchell,'" Shelley Mitchell told her identity doppelganger. "I've learned now to say very loudly, that I'm Shelley B. Mitchell – the obnoxious Shelley Mitchell."

"I got a call once and they said, 'Do you know who this is?'" recalled Shelley D. Mitchell. "'This is your long-lost lover.' I told them, 'I don't think so!' It was kind of exciting."

"My mom thought it was such an original name," said Shelley B.

The two share a number of personal characteristics and personal friends. Both drive Toyotas; prefer Apple to Android; are right-handed, semi-reformed "hippies" who like to tread about walkable Arcata; are coffee drinkers but savor the occasional latté; watch Rachel Maddow rather than Megyn Kelly; prefer the Beatles to the Rolling Stones and Van Halen to Van Hagar; and each is perfectly fine with gluten.

One time Shelley D. went to vote at the Methodist Church, only to find that Shelley B. had signed in and voted in her name. Shelley D. had to then file a provisional ballot.

As for politics, Bernie Sanders is the unanimous first choice among Arcata's Shelley Mitchells.

But should Hillary Clinton get the Democratic nomination, she'll lock up Arcata's Shelley Mitchell vote.

Another time Shelley B. charged a smoothie on Shelley D.'s account at HealthSPORT, where they both exercise. The two pet owners have been mixed up at the veterinarian's as well.

The two Shelleys are longtime community volunteers. Among other worthy endeavors, Shelley B. donates time to Reading Service of the Redwoods, where she reads news stories – including, bizarrely, this one – to help create a daily audio news feed for the visually impaired.

Shelley D. once traveled to Portland, Ore. to meet with some fellow volunteers with AFS-USA, an intercultural education group. When she introduced herself to a couple picking her up at the airport, they turned out to be friends of Shelley B. who had been expected to visit the same day, but had fallen ill. Recalls Shelley D., "They said, 'You won't believe this ...'"

"There is a lesson here: rare events do occur," Dugaw said. "They occur all the time when one considers all the possibilities."

Arreaga | ‘The terrain is very rough’

hasty in charging Arreaga and letting Shavonne Hammers go free. Now, her erratic behavior and continuing drug abuse have seriously damaged the prosecution’s account of what happened

“This could easily lead to a second mistrial,” said a long-time legal source unaffiliated with the case, but familiar with its substance. “It can completely discredit her in the eyes of the jury, leaving the prosecution hamstrung.”

It is unlikely Arreaga would be tried a third time, the source said, unless there were only one holdout, offering better odds for a successful third prosecution. There were three holdouts in the October verdict.

When Deputy District Attorney Zachary Curtis opened Arreaga’s retrial Feb. 5, he characterized his opening statement as a narrative, a “road map” for the jury to follow in weighing the facts of the complex case. Curtis conceded the evidence could be “kind of disjointed” and confusing for jurors to parse.

Public Defender Heidi Holmquist seized on Curtis’s metaphor when she opened her alternative story of who killed Eureka meth users Harley Hammers Jr., Shavonne’s estranged husband, and his girlfriend, Angel Robin Tully, both 37, in the driveway of a trailer off Fieldbrook Road.

“A map is one dimensional,” Holmquist admonished. “During this trial I believe the terrain is very rough.”

So it proved to be late in the morning of the retrial’s second day, Friday, when Shavonne Hammers admitted under oath that she had been intoxicated when she arrived at the county courthouse early on Thursday. She had been scheduled as the lead-off witness for the prosecution, as she had been in the first trial.

Shavonne Hammers’ drunken state forced Curtis to postpone her swearing-in until almost 3 p.m. Thursday afternoon, after some seven hours of delay.

However, the jury did not learn about the misadventure until late Friday morning, Feb. 6. That was when Curtis asked Shavonne Hammers in a matter-of-fact tone if she had consumed alcohol and drugs in her motel room the night before and pain pills the next morning, right before she was to appear.

An investigator for the district attorney’s office had smelled alcohol on Shavonne Hammers’ breath when she arrived at the courthouse Thursday morning and he immediately whisked her off to a private holding room in the building.

In an apparent attempt to limit the damage to the main import of Shavonne Hammers’ testimony – that Arreaga shot and killed both victims – Curtis waited until his final question Friday morning to ask Shavonne Hammers to disclose her drunkenness – just before she was to be cross-examined. Curtis knew, of course, that Holmquist would attempt to shred what was left of his star witness’ credibility.

And Holmquist taxed Shavonne Hammers immediately when she returned to the witness stand after the jury’s Friday morning coffee break at about 10:20 a.m.

Under oath, Shavonne Hammers confessed quietly, “Yes I was drunk.” She testified she had two mixed drinks that night at the motel, but claimed “I’m not quite sure” when Holmquist pressed her about how much vodka.

Instead, Shavonne Hammers held up her hand and pinched two fingers together, suggesting she had mixed about an inch or so of vodka with cranberry juice in a tall glass without saying how much juice she added. “I slept off and on,” she said.

Shavonne Hammers admitted that when the DA investigator confronted her about her breath, she “popped” two pills, Soma, a muscle relaxer, and Norco, which “helped with my pain.” She pleaded in extenuation that she had been diagnosed with pre-cancer cells and that during her period she experiences severe pain, comparable in intensity to childbirth.

“Yes, I am an addict,” Shavonne Hammers repeated on the stand.

“You were breaking the law yesterday morning right before you were to testify at a homicide trial,” Holmquist pursued. Hammers, unswervingly respectful but at various times crying, sobbing and gasping, did not demur. She spoke in a tremulous voice, taking deep breaths, struggling to regain her composure as she related her story of the killings.

Her incessant drug and alcohol abuse underscored Holmquist’s main point when she delivered her opening statement Thursday. She had urged the nine-woman, three-man jury to lend “extra attention” to Shavonne Hammers as the alternative suspect.

Curtis was careful to inform the jury up front that Shavonne Hammers has “a very volatile personality.” Holmquist goes further, insisting Shavonne Hammers, not Arreaga, was the likely killer in a classic love triangle. Shavonne Hammers had the obvious and undeniable motive, the public defender argued: to shoot her estranged and abusive husband (he once broke her jaw) and her former close friend, Tully, in a jealous rage at their illicit love affair.

In fact, Shavonne Hammers not only had the motive, but also the personality, Holmquist declared: “violent, unstable, bipolar, addicted to meth” and, in the words of Shavonne Hammers’ embittered son, “a great liar.”

Shavonne Hammers was “a desperate person at the time this happened,” Holmquist maintained, referring in part to the initial confrontation that led to gun play hours before the murders on Sept. 3, 2014.

Earlier that day, Shavonne Hammers testified, she had directed Arreaga to the Fieldbrook residence of Gary Barrick, otherwise unidentified, for a drug transaction. Shavonne Hammers had promised Arreaga that if he gave her a ride to McKinleyville, where she hoped to live with her mother after being kicked out by her partner in Lucerne, she would pay him $100 in gas money and arrange drug contacts. Arreaga was a regular dealer to help support his invalid father.

When Arreaga’s Buick pulled into Barrick’s driveway, Shavonne Hammers discovered her ex-husband’s maroon sedan already parked there. Harley Hammers was on the driver’s side, Tully was sitting in the front passenger’s seat.

Shavonne Hammers admitted that she yelled at Tully, “Get out of the car, bitch, you know you need your ass beat [sic]!”

Shavonne Hammers had been primed for a confrontation with her former friend, whom she had known since elementary school, because her husband had posted a message on Facebook quoting Tully as taunting that she would “beat my [Shavonne’s] ass.”

The tempestuous Hammers was incensed that Tully had been “sticking her nose in my family’s business.” That referred to Shavonne’s two young daughters by Harley, who were living in Lucerne with his parents under a court-approved guardianship.

Shavonne Hammers repeatedly asserted on the stand that she was not jealous of her former friend’s relationship with her estranged husband, only angry about Tully’s “interference” with her children. However, other testimony has indicated that she wanted to jeer and ridicule the lovers with sexual innuendo.

In any event, Harley Hammers “wasn’t happy” that Arreaga’s Buick was blocking his car in the Barrick driveway. “Mr. Hammers was getting ready to ram” the Buick, Shavonne Hammers told the court.

Protective of his father’s car, Arreaga “pulled out a gun” and fired two shots at Harley Hammers’ feet. (The defense does not dispute this.) He was unharmed but one of the slugs ricocheted into his driver’s car door, where it remained lodged until investigators found it after the second and fatal confrontation about five that afternoon, Sept. 3.

The victims were complete strangers to Arreaga, Holmquist noted to the jury and three alternates, suggesting her client had no motive to kill them. “He is not a killer,” she asserted, demonstrated by the fact he fired warning shots, not fatal shots, in the first altercation.

In pointing the finger at Shavonne Hammers, Holmquist repeated the tactic she employed in the first trial last fall.

But under questioning by Curtis, Shavonne Hammers testified that as they fled the murder scene with Arreaga behind the wheel, he admitted to the killings with acerbic coldness. Shocked, she asked him what had happened and “he told me he took another piece of shit out of this world” – not specifying whether he was referring to her husband or to Tully.

The retrial is projected to run for two weeks. Whether or not the jury concludes unanimously which side told “the best story,” as John Adams said, both versions are compromised by the skewed and wavering perceptions of a criminal case steeped in Humboldt’s drug underworld.

Bullock murder trial on hold

Paul Mann
MAD RIVER UNION

EUREKA – The oft-delayed trial of Redway murder suspect Gary Lee Bullock, 45, has been postponed again until Feb. 29.

Superior Court Judge John T. Feeney last week vacated the Feb. 8 trial start, saying “scheduling concerns and complications” had forced a further postponement.

The county’s judicial system is mired in a heavy backlog of cases, a jammed court calendar, a shortage of courtrooms and too few judges.

The pervasive congestion is a source of frustration and criticism among staff and attorneys alike, court sources say.

Bullock is accused of the heinous beating death of Father Eric Freed in the St. Bernard Catholic Church rectory on New Year’s Day, 2014.

The defendant re-entered his not guilty plea by reason of insanity on Feb. 2. He appeared in court in response to a last-minute revision of the charges sought by the district attorney’s office.

Feeney granted the motion, the “second amended information,” which Deputy District Attorney Andrew Isaac explained was based on the People’s conclusion that Bullock committed burglary twice when he allegedly tortured and bludgeoned Freed to death.

Isaac said the state will attempt to prove that Bullock burglarized the rectory the first time when he entered the building and the second time when he breached an interior area.

Bullock’s attorney, Deputy Public Defender Kaleb Cockrum, agreed to the motion, adding, “I don’t believe the evidence will show two burglaries, but I will argue that in court.”

Feeney read out the revised charge sheet. Count one, murder, carries three special allegations: infliction of torture; a murder committed during a first degree residential burglary; and a murder committed during commission of a carjacking.

Count two accuses Bullock of first degree residential burglary (of the rectory) and count three sets forth the corollary charge for invading a portion of the interior.

Count four alleges vehicle theft (Freed’s 2010 Nissan automobile) and count five attempted arson of an inhabited property.

Bullock is accused of beating the unarmed Freed to death with a stake and a metal object. He also attempted to burn the rectory with a lighted cigar, according to the prosecution. He has no prior felony record.

The defendant was picked up for public intoxication shortly before Freed’s murder (Union Jan. 28, 2014). He was taken into custody on $1.2 million bail when his stepfather from Garberville turned him in.

Bullock’s trial had been scheduled to start last October but was postponed because of delayed psychiatric reports and schedule conflicts arising from Cockrum’s other cases.

“housing first” approach.

Finally, supervisors decided to have the upcoming resolution state that the county will engage in a broader discussion on homelessness issues in outlying areas.

The call for the resolution follows up on last week’s joint meeting between the board and the Eureka Council. Both governments funded a report from the Sacramento-based Focus Strategies firm, which has recommended that money and effort be focused on providing housing rather than temporary emergency shelter.

Supervisor Ryan Sundberg said he wants to tap his community’s feedback before advancing.

He noted that the McKinleyville Municipal Advisory Committee wants to have a special meeting on the homelessness reduction planning and said he is wary of taking actions before that (See Democracy in Action, A2).

Supervisor Estelle Fennell had similar thoughts. “My concern is that we’re dealing with the county and I also have issues in Southern Humboldt for sure,” she said, adding that “I want to be careful on how we move forward.”

But Supervisor Virginia Bass, a former Eureka councilmember who has been working with the city on homelessness issues, said the city is ready to get to work now and county support will help.

“I appreciate the (McKinleyville) Municipal Advisory Committee’s willingness to look at this sooner, but I just think that if we can look at it from the bigger vision and not get totally down into the weeds, that would be helpful for the city to be able to move forward,” she continued.

Board Chair Mark Lovelace agreed, saying that a resolution in support of Eureka’s efforts and implementing homelessness reduction strategies will only be a statement of resolve, with details to be worked out later.

But Sundberg reiterated the importance of coordinating the effort with the county’s various communities, saying homelessness issues in unincorporated areas are varied. He suggested focusing efforts on Eureka at first and then having “a broader conversation for all of Humboldt County.”

During a public comment session, doubts were expressed about the housing first approach.

Bass defended it, saying that it has worked nationwide.

Her motion to direct staff to draft the resolution was unanimously approved.

Following the supervisors meeting, the Eureka City Council endorsed the Focus Strategies plan but held off on directing its staff to prepare a joint resolution with the county.

Plan | Next step is to prepare an EIR

❖ FROM A1

He added that “time does stop” for further work sometime prior to the county’s announcement that a new draft EIR is available for public comment.

The board has made numerous changes to the version of the update that was approved by the county’s Planning Commission in 2012. County Planner Michael Richardson explained that the update’s EIR must now be revised and recirculated for a new round of public comment on it.

“The environmental document that was associated with the earlier draft forwarded by the Planning Commission is a bit stale and needs to be refreshed,” he said.

Landowners have asked for and received map changes such as residential density increases, which trigger the potential for more daily vehicle trips and other impacts. Aspects of the update identified by staff as needing the most revision are its traffic impact analysis, noise impact analysis, greenhouse gas emission analysis and analysis of project alternatives.

The EIR will be developed with the assistance of a yet-to-be-hired consulting firm. Supervisors voted to direct staff to develop a Request for Proposals

(RFP) document that outlines the work that needs to be done and invites firms to propose contracts for doing it.

Supervisors gave staff four weeks to return with a final RFP for approval.

Richardson said any remaining land use designation requests can be processed by the end of this month. A consultant is expected to be hired in March, with work on the EIR carried out in April and May.

A final version of the EIR will be developed in June and July, Richardson continued, with Board of Supervisors review scheduled for Aug. 22.

The hearing was continued to that date. “With that, we get a long, long break from the General Plan Update,” said Board Chair Mark Lovelace.

But Fennell noted that for planning and legal staff, work will continue full swing as the update’s impact analysis is revised.

Arcata's well-traveled cannon and its storied history

The gun was offloaded at the California Barrel Factory (where Wing Inflatables currently resides) and towed up to the Arcata Veterans' memorial Building (Vets' Hall). Originally a flagpole was there and the gun sat to the north of the sidewalk, but was later moved to the south side to allow for a wheelchair ramp. They set bolts in the slab for tie-downs, but never used them.

A significant clue about the cannon was right on the barrel; four lines of mostly pictographic characters above the breech. I wondered who I could find to translate, then remembered a distant cousin who has a son in Japan.

Lee said indeed, his son speaks fluent Japanese, and supplied his email address. I shot off a couple photos of the inscriptions with a plea for help and a day later I learned more than I ever expected.

The top line says it's a Model 92, 10 centimeters (four inches) cannon. The third line, below the No. 136, says it was made by the Osaka Infantry Armory, and the bottom line tells us it was built in 1941. He went on Wikipedia to find a link to the armory where the gun was built and another link to the gun itself.

All is in Japanese, which I can't read, but the page showed a picture of an identical gun. He deciphered that "the series was first built in 1923 but was redesigned several times until its birth as a Model 92 in 1935. It was valued for its portability, but considered a bit lacking in power."

I had to laugh about "valued for its portability," thinking back to the rumor of it once having been moved up to Humboldt State's campus. The stories I'd heard were that Jim Ely never admitted to being part of that prank, but that he had returned it. While that sounds suspicious, Jim was the sort of guy who might have brought such a thing back regardless, so who's to accuse? I considered Jim a friend but he passed away before I thought to ask about it. A call to his sister, MaryAnn, however, led to a phone number for one of his best friends, Norm Eaton, who now lives in North Carolina.

MYSTERY MARKINGS Model 92, subject of much mystery and pranks, revealed its secrets after detective work by the late Marino Sichi. It was built in 1941 by the Osaka Infantry Armory and can – or could – deliver a shell to a target 35 miles away.

Norm said that he had never admitted to taking the cannon either. Some prodding eventually led to a story. Other than Jim, Norm couldn't recall who else was involved, nor who had the idea, but one night in 1956 around three in the morning, about four guys hitched it up behind Norm's '46 Plymouth. "I didn't have a trailer hitch or anything, I think we just tied it to the bumper or somewhere with some rope. We had to drive up the old way to Founders Hall, and somehow we got it up on the sidewalk below the front doors with it aimed out over the town. Things were pretty quiet in those days, but there were street lights and we couldn't believe nobody saw us." I asked Norm if what he revealed could be mentioned. "Yes, go ahead, I don't think they'll be coming after us, now." When I forwarded the story to Virgil he recalled, "Yes, people used to say the gun should be turned a little and aimed toward City Hall."

Virgil mentioned another story that supposedly took place about 1955. The Sheriff's Office had a call from a citizen that a cannon was being towed up Highway 101. They caught up with the vehicle nearly in Orick, where the culprits were made to bring it back. After those incidents he said they used a long pipe wrench and locked the brakes tightly, which are probably rusted together by now. Later, a museum in Oregon persistently tried to purchase it, but the Lodge wouldn't let it go.

My original quest to talk to Marino wasn't in vain. I contacted his daughter, Janet Kelly, to learn if she had come across any information in his estate. I commend her for the time she put into digging through the papers of a man who I was told "never threw anything away." A couple of days later she called back to say she had found some information.

Indeed, Marino had contacted the Consulate General of Japan in San Francisco in 1995 and the Vice Consul, Koji Tsuchiya had replied with information that verified what I'd learned. "The Model 92 is readily recognized by its long slender barrel and tail (the entire gun is 27 feet long, the barrel almost 16 feet), and it has been designed for long-range fire. Other distinctive features are the pronounced length of the sleigh and the three step interrupted thread breechblock. The recoil system is hydropneumatic. Mounted on heavily constructed wooden wheels with solid rubber tires, the weapon is normally tractor drawn but may be drawn by a five-ton truck. It is capable of firing a high explosive (long pointed shell), chemical or armor-piercing projectile. Time fuses are provided for the smoke, incendiary, and chemical shells. Total weight added that because "the position of the center of gravity was considered, these cannons were towed by automobiles."

In addition, Mr. Hattori added "many type 92 cannons were used by the Japanese Army in WW2, including the Battle of Bataan, Philippines." He did not know exactly where our serial No. 136 was used during the war.

One question still lingered in my mind. Why is the second line on the breech, the "No 136," seemingly in English? Earlier, one bit of false information had sidetracked me into thinking the cannon was actually British, supplied to British-held Singapore, then captured by the Japanese when they invaded China. The last line, the date of manufacture implies numbers in Japanese and it didn't make sense. I decided to email Matt in Japan again. He replied, "As for the numbers on the cannon, after the Meiji Restoration in the 1860s, lots of ideas and technology from the West were actively sought out and imported. It was during this time that Arabic numerals made their way here. Even so, they didn't completely replace kanji (Chinese writing system adapted to Japanese) numbering, which is still used today alongside Arabic numerals."

One facet I did not research is the stenciling in durable red ink on the breech close to the Japanese engraving. I can only guess the Z2 FMAR 198 was put there by our government to identify the artifact as it was requisitioned or entered our country. I felt I'd learned enough, however and can let that question lie.

This piece first appeared in the winter 2012 edition of the Humboldt Historian, Vol. 61, No. 4.

Bob Felter is a local builder and historian.

is 3,730 kg. (8,206 lbs). In addition to the barrel being able to tilt upward to 45 degrees and downward five degrees, it could swing 36 degrees (right or left)." It had a range of about 18 km (something like 11 miles; Hello Humboldt Hill!, Greetings Westhaven!). The weight of a typical shell was 15.76 kg, close to 35 lbs.

The vice consul must have contacted a fellow countryman, because a second letter from a Syogo Hattori, History Division; National Institute for Defense Studies arrived in Marino's mail several months later from Tokyo. It contained identical information, but

Wrangling waste will address myriad problems, bring opportunity

At the end of January, the Arcata City Council and staff met in a study session with representatives of Zero Waste Humboldt, the organization founded by Margaret Gainer to continue the struggle to get our consumption and waste-making under control after the loss of the original Arcata Recycling Center. Besides Gainer, the council heard from Julie Layshock, Humboldt State lecturer in environmental chemistry, and Maureen Hart of the Humboldt Waste Management Authority.

The move towards a "global economy" has not been good for recycling or waste reduction. Instead of confronting our own over-consumption over the last 30 or so years, recycling became an export industry. We didn't need to deal with all our waste plastic, electronics and such here because the Chinese would take it. That was never more than a short-term solution and led to wide swings in prices paid for recyclables. Now the Chinese have enough waste plastic of their own and don't want ours anymore.

In the long run, this is a good thing. Just consider the carbon footprint of shipping tons of plastic waste to China. How was that ever going to help us combat climate change or save the ocean from complete destruction? Now that we don't have the option of avoiding consequences of our own making anymore, we have to come up with a new plan.

The city is under a mandate to reduce the amount of waste its citizens are making and will be focusing on two areas of the waste stream, those being organic/food waste and paper. But instead of shipping that somewhere else, the idea is to find a local use. Arcata's Fire & Light Originals glassware is the example that first comes to mind when considering remanufacturing a local waste product.

But according to Hart, there are many possibilities for reusing and remaking the things we throw away. These reuse enterprises lend themselves to cooperative and small scale business structures, from composting to remaking used mattresses to shredding cardboard for repacking to possibilities waiting to be discovered.

As we used to say in recycling, there is no "away" for the things we toss out. Everything goes somewhere. Think of all that plastic contaminating our oceans. Seeing waste as feedstock for re-useable manufacture has the potential to enhance our local economy and reduce the impact of waste on our local environment. And because of pioneers like Gainer, Layshock and Hart, there are programs to help creative entrepreneurs get started.

Mary Ella Anderson recommends a visit to the Zero Waste and Humboldt Waste Management Authority websites to learn more about the re-manufacturing potential of our waste stream.

Freedom from fragrant chemicals

In a recent edition of this paper, under the event listings, one talk that was to take place at Eureka High included a “no fragrance” requirement for attendees. That sentence made me so happy!

I have multiple chemical sensitivity. This has been a terrible, difficult development for me because around two years ago I was fine. My triggers are plastic, petroleum and “fragrance,” not surprisingly because all fragrance (unless it is based on essential oils) is petroleum based.

People douse themselves and/or their laundry with fragrance, then go out in public radiating fumes for several feet around themselves. At best they are probably unaware that all “fragrance” is petroleum based and therefore toxic to all, especially children. At worst, it is very inconsiderate.

The “fragrance” in laundry products is more virulent than ever, and studies are proving that they are carcinogenic. Whether we are breathing the fumes from dryer vents or rising off of people’s clothing, it is intrusive and health threatening.

For your health and the health of your loved ones, please switch to unscented or free and clear products. Aren’t we up against enough toxics as it is?

I am practically unable to enter second-hand shops any more, and the last pair of pants I purchased, I aired out of doors for two weeks, laundered them twice and still can’t wear them. They still reek. That this stuff clings so tenaciously to fabric makes me wonder what it is doing to our precious water!

And by the way, these are the same scents used in kitty litter. Not only are you toxic, you smell like a cat box!

Supes’ compensation questioned

Recently, the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors approved a compensation package for the classified union employees. The agreement is comprised of a three percent increase in April 2016, two percent in July 2016 and two percent in January 2017. The county will also increase the contribution to CalPers by three percent. Included in the board’s action will be a resolution which will allow them to accept the same compensation package.

At present, there are positions in the Health and Human Services Department with salaries such that they qualify for the same assistance that they administer to their clients.

Presently, the members of the board receive a salary of $81,600. With the $5,480 increase, their salary will increase to $87,450. Using an average salary of $35,000 for the classified union positions, the salary will increase by $2,300, to $37,500. The numbers indicate that the percent of salary increase for the boardmembers is much larger than the classified union employees. I believe the cost of living increase is the same for everyone, yet the compensation packages do not reflect that.

One supervisor commented that the raise was minimal compared to the hours they put in and how expensive travel is as part of their job duties.

I find it hard to believe that the boardmembers benefit from an agreement that other bargaining units have negotiated.

Dangers of the herb

Thank you, Paul Mann, for your article on the downsides of marijuana (Union, Jan. 27). Knowing its effects on the developing brain, the number of psychotic breaks adults are suffering from its frequent use, as well as the high THC content in today’s weed (which is not medicinal in nature), I have been very disturbed by the lack of dialogue around these issues.

My only complaint to the Union is that the article was not put on the front page in its entirety.

Given the direction of our county and country, scientific research and information needs to become public knowledge to help inform policy decisions. Just as there are warnings about cigarette smoking and alcohol consumption, people of all ages need to be aware of the inherent dangers of this herb in today’s form.

Please keep talking about this, Paul – you seem to be the only public voice in this county that is speaking up!

Driscoll’s duneworthy solutions

It wasn’t real clear on what Brad Job was trying to say in his letter regarding Uri Driscoll and beach grass (Union, Feb. 3). Why he considers Mr. Driscoll’s career as a professional farrier worthy of criticism seems unnecessarily spiteful. Not only is Mr. Driscoll highly skilled at what he does professionally, he is one of the most educated people in the county on what is going on with dune management. He has taken a huge amount of his own time to learn what is happening and we should be grateful he is raising a big red flag.

For Mr. Job to suggest that tourists are coming in droves to look at a flower and therefore we should keep spending millions in a vain attempt to remove a grass that is here to stay, is just plain ridiculous. They do both seem to agree that homelessness needs more attention but I only see Mr Driscoll offering any solutions.

Don’t judge Wheetley prematurely

Regarding the DUI arrest of Mark Wheetley (Union, Jan. 13), I would encourage folks to reserve judgment until more is known about the incident, as Mark has requested. I know Mark to be a stand-up guy with a lengthy record of public service. He deserves our patience in this matter, and an opinion of him that considers the whole package. Mark has a lot more positive things to accomplish for our community.

Driving forward into the future

The U.S. Department of Transportation is proposing to spend up to $4 billion to help the rapidly expanding autonomous-vehicle industry, but I suspect very little of that money will find its way to Humboldt County. It is primarily intended to fund testing of Internet-connected vehicles on major interstate highways.

The segments of U.S. Highway 101 and State Route 299 that pass through our area will probably be among the last to be equipped with the high tech gear to support self-driving cars.

The challenging geography defeats reliable radio, cell phone and GPS signals, so interactive motoring is a long time off. The feds are mostly interested in what they call designated corridors. Tesla is already hinting about a car that could travel independently from San Francisco to New York City to pick up the owner, even recharging itself along the way.

There will likely be plenty of carping in Congress about “wasteful” spending, but the department’s major goals are safety and emissions reduction. More than three quarters of vehicle accidents are due to driver error – that number could be cut to nearly zero. And coordination between computer-controlled cars is expected to minimize harmful emissions as traffic jams are eased.

It only makes sense that the roll-out will be in densely populated areas with crammed roadways. Some of the infrastructure already exists, monitoring traffic flows – or stagnation. Robot cars that could communicate with control centers and each other could dramatically reduce congestion.

Up until now, the biggest progress has been made by Google, a technology company. But major automakers are jumping onto the bandwagon, which will propel progress at a much faster rate. The Big Three can churn out robot cars by the millions.

When they get here, there will be big benefits. Just replacing impaired drivers with computers will be a big safety plus. Most of us probably think we are much better drivers than a robot, but that the robots will be better than most of the other drivers on the road.

Because our local economy depends on visitors, how our area integrates with the designated corridors will be critical. The feds are open to the concept of cars without steering wheels or pedals. How would that work if a visitor wanted to turn off U.S. Highway 101 onto the Avenue of the Giants?

Nearly all our attractions are off the main highways. Transporting people and their stuff could be a big problem. Depending on who you believe, robot cars could be in general use in five to 15 years; can Humboldt be ready that soon?

National parks in general tend to be hundreds of miles from population centers. Yosemite, with serious emission issues in the valley, could benefit from robot cars which could be sent to remote parking areas outside the park, but who would provide security? In fact, the insurance industry stands to undergo a sea change on a lot of fronts.

Rates are expected to drop, because collisions should become a thing of the past. But if something goes wrong, who will be responsible, the car owner or the automaker? If the Internet signal suddenly vanishes – which happens pretty often around here – what’s to prevent chaos on the roads?

Completely autonomous cars would solve a lot of problems. Seniors who can’t drive because of medical problems are obvious customers. But will high prices lock them out of the market?

That’s another reason Humboldt is likely to lag behind on acquiring robot cars. The prices will probably be pretty steep, and in a county where people are still driving their parents’ pickups from the 1960s, it will be a while before everyone converts to the new technology. With HSU students constantly infusing the area with cutting-edge lifestyles, maybe they will introduce new ways to finance their education.

The Uber or Lyft model requires a driver, but a robot car doesn’t. What if you could book a ride to school for the kids while the car owner is in class? What would be the lower age limit for children to ride without adult supervision?

Removing amateur drivers from the roads will almost certainly provide a net safety benefit, but what about all the people who currently drive for a living? The long-distance trucking industry faces a driver shortage as retirement looms for many drivers, so autonomous trucks might be an attractive option. It’s an unhealthy lifestyle that doesn’t seem to appeal to younger folks.

The classic issue with robots remains. Taking over tedious, repetitive jobs that humans don’t do well also puts humans out of work. Our economy is already designed to run best without enough good jobs to go around. Will robot cars make that worse?

Elizabeth Alves wonders how the sensors on robot cars will handle rain, fog and snow. Comments and suggestions are welcome care of the Union or to mysidestreet@gmail.com.

THE PLAZA'S PROLIFIC PAINTER

Janine Volkmar
MAD RIVER UNION

ARCATA – You may have seen Antoinette “Toni” Magyar painting on the Plaza during the Farmers’ Markets.

She loves to paint the fruit, the veggies, the flowers, the people. And she loves to paint them together. One of her most successful paintings happened when a little girl wandered by, waving a huge pink dahlia. Magyar captured the moment.

Other paintings from the market include farmworkers with their arms full of produce.

You’ll see these and more at her new one-woman show, titled “Paintings from the Plaza and Beyond,” which opens Friday, Feb. 12 at the Upstairs Gallery at Umpqua Bank, 1063 G St., Arcata.

Magyar loves the jazz at Libation, the wine shop and tasting bar on the south side of the Plaza. Her painting “Libation” celebrates the convivial atmosphere there, with owner Ed Bernard featured prominently in the group of tasters.

Other paintings to be included in the show are still “on the easel,” according to Magyar who works at white hot speed to finish paintings.

Magyar has been living and painting in Humboldt County for three years. She’s currently artist-in-residence at the Westhaven Center for the Arts. She works at Strawberry Rock Gallery in Trinidad and has made that gallery an example of how to hang a good show. She’s also active in the Redwood Art Association.

Magyar also loves mural work. Her 360-degree view of Trinidad is a tourist attraction at the Lighthouse Grill in the Trinidad Shopping Center. If Magyar is having a glass of wine with friends there, she can be heard urging folks to “use the bathroom. That’s where my mural is.”

She may get some strange looks at first, but always hears compliments after people take her advice.

A local woman was so taken with the mural that she offered the artist $50 to include her parked car in the background. Magyar happily complied.

Then the woman’s husband wanted his Mustang in the mural as well. All joking aside, it cost him $100 and he was happy about it.

Magyar also painted a sea life scene on the ceiling at the entry of the restaurant and recently completed a compass enclosed map of Trinidad on the side of the town’s information center.

“Paintings from the Plaza and Beyond” opens during Arts! Arcata (see listings below) and runs through February.

For more information, or to have your car inserted into a mural, email Toni at tonimagyar@comcast.net.

LIBATION Toni Magyar’s painting captures the conviviality at the Arcata Plaza wine bar, featuring Libation owner Ed Bernard at right, probably expounding on the finer points of a rare vintage or delicious imported cheese.

ELEGANCE Woodblock print by Roberta “Berti” Welty showing at Humboldt Unitarian Universalist Fellowship throughout the month of February.

❖ CASTING CALL

Star in ‘Moon Over Buffalo’

NORTH COAST REPERTORY THEATRE
EUREKA – The North Coast Repertory Theatre (NCRT) announces open auditions for the comedy Moon Over Buffalo on Sunday and Monday, Feb. 14 and 15 at 6 p.m. each evening. Director Scott Malcolm seeks four men for characters in their late 20s through their 50s and four women for characters in their 20s to their 70s. In the madcap comedy tradition of Lend Me a Tenor, the hilarious Moon Over Buffalo centers on George and Charlotte Hay, fading stars of the 1950s. At the moment, they're playing Private Lives and Cyrano De Bergerac in rep in Buffalo, New York with five actors. On the brink of a disastrous split-up caused by George's dalliance with a young ingénue, they receive word that they might just have one last shot at stardom: Frank Capra is coming to town to see their matinée, and if likes what he sees, he might cast them in his movie remake of The Scarlet Pimpernel. Unfortunately for George and Charlotte, everything that could go wrong does go wrong, abetted by a visit from their daughter's clueless fiancé and hilarious uncertainty about which play they're actually performing, caused by Charlotte's deaf old mother who hates every bone in George's body. All roles require movement and may include minimal stage combat and pratfalls. The roles of Charlotte and George require a brief sword fight and will be required to work with a fight choreographer. Actors will read from the script. Dress comfortably and be prepared for movement if needed. No appointment is necessary. Auditions will be held at NCRT, 300 Fifth St., Eureka. Production dates are July 21 through August 13. Contact NCRT at (707) 268-0175 if you have any questions.

❖ CD RELEASE PARTY

DELL'ARTE INTERNATIONAL
ARCATA – The original motion picture soundtrack for the upcoming Dell'Arte film Mary Jane: A Musical Potumentary will debut for public listening and sales at a CD release party on Monday, Feb. 15 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at Richards' Goat Tavern and Tea Room, 401 I St., Arcata. Visit with artists and members of the production team, preview and purchase the official motion picture soundtrack, watch exclusive clips from the film, and sing along with the Mary Jane band. Mary Jane: A Musical Potumentary is a film adaptation of Dell'Arte International's highest-attended stage production, Mary Jane: The Musical, an original musical revue that explores the social, economic and political issues surrounding cannabis cultivation and legalization in Humboldt County. Devised by Dell'Arte Artistic Director Michael Fields, the production draws on voices from across the county. Ten local songwriters contributed to the 17 songs featured on the soundtrack and in the stage production after Fields put out a call to local musicians to write about Humboldt cannabis culture. The songs vary in musical styles and approaches from Bollywood to reggae to salsa. Lila Nelson's "Grow Inside" is a humorous story of unrequited love between an indoor plant and outdoor plant. Joanie Rose's "My Son" laments the effects of children raised in a black market family business. Scott Menzie's songs pull no punches about the psychic and environmental impact of the local multi-million dollar industry and the threat of corporate interests. Attendees at the party will get a first look at the film, produced in partnership with Emmy-nominated filmmaker John Howarth. Mary Jane: A Musical Potumentary takes the story off the stage and into the hills where musical numbers and documentary footage were shot on location throughout Humboldt County. Admission is free. maryjanemusical.com, (707) 668-5663

MEN IN BLACK Johnny Cash tribute band Cash'd Out hit Arcata last Friday, rocking HumBrews. The Union couldn't resist getting the band out to the Craftsman's Mall, where a giant work of graffiti that is clearly visible from the 101 pays tribute to the departed singer. Band members George Bernardo (drums), Douglas Benson (vocals), Stephen Rey (bass) and Kevin Manuel (guitar) started out in San Diego and will hit clubs and bars everywhere, man, before coming back to play nearby in Oregon. ROAD WARRIOR Bluesman Tommy Castro returns to Arcata this Monday.

ARCATA – Tommy Castro & The Painkillers will serve up a serious dose of high-octane, toe-tapping, upbeat blues Monday, Feb. 15 at Humbolt Brews, 856 10th St. in Arcata.

The veteran rocker and his band are celebrating the release of their new album, Method to My Madness, which Castro says was produced “using no recording studio wizardry, just the unadulterated sound of the band.”

Unadulterated is good way to describe the group’s music. There’s no Auto-Tune going on here, no elaborate mixing. They’re not serving the musical equivalent of an overwrought frou cocktail with a sprig of basil and a little paper umbrella. This is straight up bourbon.

The music is gritty, raucous, hot-blooded and thoroughly danceable. It’s fun stuff, reminiscent of the works of B.B. King, Elvin Bishop, Ray Charles and James Brown – just some of Castro’s musical influences.

It’s the kind of music you would play at a house party, or lose yourself in during a long road trip, especially the song “Ride,” with its mesmerizing backbeat.

Keeping the whole musical show rocketing forward is Castro himself, whose vocals alternate from being gritty and fierce, to fervid, raw and simply beautiful, as in the soul ballad “Died and Gone to Heaven,” in which Castro sounds eerily like Otis Redding.

Castro is backed by The Painkillers, featuring bassist Randy McDonald, keyboardist Michael Emerson and drummer Bowen Brown.

“With this album I was trying to get back to my main ingredients: blues and soul,” Castro states in a press release. “I went for the energy of connecting with my band. We kept everything raw, capturing the feeling of playing live. I’m not about being perfect. I’m about being real.”

The shows starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $20. humbrews.com

WAKE UP Two women on a stage jump in and out of eight masked characters in a vibrant serenade. A show full of humor, action, tenderness and everyday drama. A lively lullaby in eight walks, eight voices and eight faces and eight ways to end and begin a day. I Am Awake plays at the Arcata Playhouse, 1251 Ninth St., one evening only, today, Feb. 10 at 8 p.m. Played, sung and performed by Sarah Liane Foster and Barbara Draeger, right, directed by Matteo Destro (who also created the masks) with scenography by Casey James Mulderig. Advance tickets are $20/$13 Playhouse members available at Wildberries Marketplace, through BrownPaperTickets.com or (707) 822-1575. SUBMITTED PHOTO

❖ THEATRE REVIEW

See 3PO

ROGUES' GALLERY Rigel Schmitt, Tyler Egerer, Kaitlen Osburn and Christopher Kehoe in The Threepenny Opera. PHOTO BY GRETA TURNEY

Lauraine Leblanc
MAD RIVER UNION

ARCATA/FERNDALE – There’s something about The Threepenny Opera that resists likeability. Its main character, after all, is Mack the Knife, yes, that guy, the shark in that eminently swinging tune about a cold-blooded killer. The rest of the crew – treacherous prostitutes, backstabbing thugs and corrupt cops – are no better. From the very debut of this satiric 1928 epic play-with-music by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill, audiences and critics alike were aghast.

And yet The Threepenny Opera, especially in its current staging co-produced by the Arcata Playhouse and Ferndale Rep, is a great work. It’s art, and as Macheath snarls in Act 1, “art isn’t nice.” It’s genius.

“Genius” is, in fact, the proper term for Scenic Designer Raymond Gutierrez’ set, a crazy quilt of tilted platforms on which the actor/musicians perform. The set perpetually puts the actors off-balance, emphasizing the precariousness of their characters’ lives, a liminal existence in which everything could, and often does, come crashing down on them.

Epic co-production of The Threepenny Opera isn't nice, but it's a work of art “Genius” is not too strong a term for the choices made by Director Leira Satlof, who not only has the cast sing, but play instruments as well. As a result, the majority of the cast is onstage the whole time, witnessing every lie, betrayal and crime. If you watch the background players, the cast becomes a chorus, reacting to the onstage action. It’s genius.

And that’s only possible because the cast, itself, is so remarkable. Most double up on roles, most sing, and – it bears repeating – most play instruments, many of them, more than one. Right there, on stage. Without breaking character or missing a line.

While every member of the ensemble was exceptional on preview night, some notable performances must be acknowledged. Christopher Kehoe, in the role of Macheath, was perfectly charming and sleazy. He found a formidable match in Carl McGahan as Mr. Peachum, whose warm yet edgy voice filled every corner of the theatre.

The always-funny Kaitlen Osburn as Polly Peachum and her foil, the saucy Sarah McKinney as Lucy Brown, stood their ground, as well as Jackie Dandeneau in the role of Jenny. Osburn’s rendition of “Pirate Jenny” was especially notable.

Costumes by Lynn Horgan and choreography by Laura Muñoz were on point, and lighting by Michael Foster perfectly stark.

The Threepenny Opera is at the Arcata Playhouse until Feb. 14, then moves to the Ferndale Rep until Feb. 28. It would be fascinating to see it at each venue, to see it translated from the intimacy of the Playhouse, which puts the actors practically at the same level as the audience, to the more formal setting and higher stage of the Ferndale Rep. Do not miss this work of art. It’s genius.

Valentino, Venus & Cupid are big on love

It's Valentine's Day this weekend, and what better way to celebrate than to fall in love with a new companion-for-life? When you're out shopping for boxes of chocolate and flowers this week, consider stopping by Companion Animal Foundation to meet Venus, Valentino and their brother from another mother, Cupid!

These three adolescents are big on love. Valentino, the handsome black and white young male, and his all gray sister Venus love to curl up and be stroked for hours. Their all-black friend, Cupid, will head-butt your hand for ear-scratches. So if you're looking for a special someone to be your Valentine, consider our three special young cats. They have a lot of love to give and can't wait to find someone to give it to.

Valentino, Venus and Cupid are up-to-date on their vaccines, have been treated for parasites, tested for Feline Leukemia and FIV and, as soon as they have been spayed/neutered, will be ready to go home with a new family.

If you're ready to fall in love, then come and visit the thrift store at 88 Sunny Brae Center in Arcata. While at our store, be sure to check out our new raffle. The first drawing will be at the end of March, so be sure to come by and enter.

If you have any questions about CAF, adoptable animals or the programs we offer, you can call us at (707) 826-7387, email us cafanimals@gmail.com, visit cafanimals.org, or check out Companion Animal Foundation on Facebook.

HEALTH & HUMAN SERVICES IN ORICK Humboldt County Department of Health & Human Services Mobile Outreach will be at the Orick Community Resource Center on Thursday, Feb. 18 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Visitors to the bus can be assisted with CalFresh, MediCal, In-Home Supportive Services, veterans' services and child support. Humboldt County Mental Health clinicians will provide on-board counseling and can link clients up with supportive case management. For more information about program services, call (707) 441-4650.

Food of the dogs to please your Canine Overlords

It has to be some sort of undiscovered canine toxoplasmosis. There can be no other explanation of why I find myself cooking meat for my dogs. I'm a vegetarian.

Toxoplasmosis is a disease in humans and other mammals caused by the parasite Toxoplasma gondii, which is spread by cats. Research has shown that rodents infected with the parasite show neurological changes that cause them to become attracted to cats. It causes humans to become slaves to their cats. OK, well, that part hasn't been proven by science, but you have to admit that it's plausible.

So far, though, the mechanism by which our Canine Overlords have enslaved us remains undiscovered. Aliens most likely think that dogs are the dominant species on our planet, having subjugated the apex predator. I meditate on this every morning when I wake up scrunched into the smallest possible corner of my bed, struggling to pull a corner of sheet over myself while my dogs luxuriate in the center of a warm soft nest of comfort created, in part, by my shivering carcass.

The magnificence of my Canine Overlords has increased, of late, as I have started making my own dog food. In all seriousness, in the last month or so, the dogs' fur has become so glossy they shine. Their eyes are brighter. They are more active.

After years of believing that dogs were carnivores, it turns out that they are, in fact, omnivores. Hardly surprising, since domestic dogs evolved alongside humans, eating what we ate. Even admonitions not to feed dogs "people food" have relaxed of late. Although dogs' nutritional needs differ from ours, it is possible, and even surprisingly easy, to make your own food of the dogs.

In keeping with our desire to eliminate plastic, making our own dog food means we don't have to find some use for a gaint empty plastic bag every month; there are only so many tote bags a person needs. Making your own dog food can be waste-free thanks to the bulk foods section and the butcher.

The recipe at right is our basic dog food formula, though, as you will see, there's plenty of room for substitutions. Beans (presoaked and then cooked in fresh water) could be substituted for lentils. Rice could be replaced by oats. There are lots of vegetables, berries and fruits that are great for dogs. Avoid using onions, garlic or grapes, though, as these are toxic.

Because this makes a soft food, we've increased the amount of tooth brushing to which we subject the dogs, as well as giving them something to chew on, either a nice raw meaty bone or some other hard chew, such as yak milk treats, every week.

So here's our basic recipe. Oh, and here are the necessary caveats. Do your research. Consult your vet. Check with your Canine Overlords. Do try this at home.

Basic Homemade Dog Food

This makes enough for five days for two 35 to 40 lb. dogs (portion sizes vary; experiment with your dog). I alternate the vegan version with the meaty version. Double the recipe and freeze half for yet more convenience.

Ingredients

- 1 medium to large sweet potato
- 2 medium carrots
- ½ cup red lentils
- ½ cup green lentils
- ½ cup quinoa
- ½ cup brown rice
- 3 cups water
- ½ cup fresh or frozen peas or spinach, or both
- 1½ cups unsalted, natural peanut butter or 1 lb. lean ground meat or 14 oz. of extra firm tofu, mashed

Peel the sweet potatoes and wash and top the carrots. Dice both into small pieces. Put them in a large pot with the lentils, quinoa, rice and water. Bring to a boil and then simmer about 45 minutes to one hour, stirring occasionally. Add more water if needed. Add peas and/or spinach near the end.

When done, allow to cool, then mash with a potato masher.

Stir in the peanut butter or cook the lean meat or tofu in a pan, cool, and stir in. Refrigerate.

Serve at room temperature supplemented with omega 3 oil and a canine multivitamin powder.

Ace could be the one & Sunny would light up your life

Looking for the perfect valentine? Well, you couldn't find anything that says "unconditional love" better than a dog, and we have quite a few that would love to be yours.

Ace is a one-and-a-half-year-old male Boxer mix. He is black with a white blaze on his chest and occasionally a little white happy slobber on his nose!

Ace is tall and elegant, with a happy trot to his gait. He knows a few commands and can walk very nicely on the leash. Ace is very good about checking in with his walker as he walks; a stroll is an activity for two in his mind, not just a stroll for him. In the play yard, he is a happy goofball, playing home where he has a yard to play in, a friend to walk with and a person who sees how smart and loving he can be. He would benefit from attending a training class with his new owner; he has a lot of respect for humans that are confident in what they want from him.

He is very dog-friendly and would do fine in a home with other dogs.

Ace is neutered, micro-chipped and current on his vaccinations. He is at the Humboldt County Animal Shelter, where he has been since last October. More info about Ace or other pets at the shelter is available at (707) 840-9132.

Another little loyal and loving dog is our rescue girl, Sunny. Sunny is a medium-sized border collie cross, probably about six years old.

I first heard about Sunny when my friend Bill called and said there was a dog running in the road on a rainy day in Arcata. Together, we tried to find her again, but to no avail. Sunny was then spotted everywhere from Eureka to Trinidad, with one report of her even getting on a bus!

When she was finally caught, she was very scared of everything and no one wanted to touch her. Armed with some high-value goodies from my friends at the Arcata Co-op deli, I went in to get to know her. At first she was very cautious of any contact, but soon was happy to take treats out of my hand. By the third visit, she wagged when she saw me, which felt like a lot of progress. Two more short visits and I was able to put a collar on her and go for a walk. Her tail was wagging a little more each time!

When we made it to the playpen, I got to see the real Sunny. She loves to play fetch and will toss the ball back to the thrower. She does a little happy dance with the ball as she brings it back. She loves to be petted (who would have guessed?) and will go to new people when she is with someone that she trusts already.

This dog was once someone's pet. She knows sit, fetch, come and is just a lovely girl. She gets along well with other dogs, especially after a chance to meet them slowly. If you would like to meet Sunny, please contact Redwood Pals Rescue at redwoodpalsrescue@gmail.com or (707) 839-9692.

International Education Week at Humboldt State

MAD RIVER UNION

HUMBOLDT STATE – Learn about global cultures and participate in a wide variety of events at HSU’s 16th International Education Week from Feb. 15 to 19. The event includes over 50 hours of programming, 40 presenters (faculty, staff, invited guests, students, a diplomat in residence and keynote speaker) and student led-social events.

The event starts on Monday, Feb. 15 with opening ceremonies featuring Sambe de Alegria leading a parade at the quad. The afternoon features speakers on topics as diverse as the collapse of the Soviet Union and climate change refugees, a student panel disussing “The Sino-American Story,” presentations on working internationally and international recipe exchange that evening.

Tuesday, Feb. 16 features a day of talks on the Black Death, food sovereignty in Sri Lanka, sustainable development, perspectives on Senegal, and keynote speaker Richard Marcus of CSU Long Beach talking on the topic “Governing the Global Uncommons: The Tragedy of Water Resource Complexity in Madagascar, Kenya, Israel and Klamath USA.” The keynote starts with a reception at 5 p.m., followed by a talk at 5:30 in the Kate Buchanan Room. Also on Tuesday evening is a dessert reception honoring the Peace Corps Volunteers of Humboldt County in the Reese Bullen Gallery (hosting an exhibition of African masks that week) from 7 to 8:15 p.m. Peace Corps returners across the county are more than welcome.

Wednesday offers a wide choice of faculty presentations and Ambassador Lew Lukens, who is what is called a “diplomat in residence” and whose most recent posting was in Senegal. There will be an international film night in the Kate Buchanan Room from 6 to 9 p.m.

Thursday offers more presentations. In the evening, Andrea Tuttle, a local environmental activist, will report on her experience at the Paris Climate Change talks, followed by an international music night.

Friday features a half day, with more fascinating presentations on topics from Mormonism to yoga.

All events are free and open to the public.

The full program is available at humboldt.edu/iew.

Winter in Westhaven to support Trinidad arts this summer

Historians Jerry and Gisela Rohde present “The Story Catchers of Northwestern California” today, Feb. 10 from 5 to 7 p.m. in the Trinidad Library. The discussion will center around how the legacy of local Indian tribes was partially preserved by the collaboration between tribal elders and dedicated ethnographers.

This is an OLLI class with a fee of $55 or $30 for OLLI members. The class is reported by the Library Sustaining Committee as nearly full but you might call (707) 826-5880 in case there is a cancellation or room for another attendee or two.

Speaking of the library, new manager Kristen Dalziel had her first days in the Trinidad branch last week. She says she is enjoying her new position very much and hopes to serve the community for a long time. Volunteer helpers Tisa Jewell, Cheryl Gilmour and Carol Johnson cheerfully assisted her and a library full of children and adults browsing, reading and working at computers.

Winter in Westhaven

The final Trinidad Art Nights fundraising event, Winter in Westhaven, takes place Friday, Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. at the Westhaven Center for the Arts (WCA), 501 South Westhaven Dr.

All are invited to participate in the community-style variety show featuring fire dancing by Circus of the Elements, puppet-making and performance by Sean Powers, stories by Paul Woodland, original music by new Musician-in-Residence Josephine Johnson, along with kids’ crafts, food from Lighthouse Grill and Moonstone Crossing wine.

Admission is $5, or donate more to keep Trinidad Art Nights on the calendar on first Fridays from May through October! Children may enjoy the fun at no charge. Tim Breed and Chakeeta Garabedian are the organizers of the festivities.

Third Friday Blues Series

The Hann-Hemingway Project performs blues, jazz and variety tunes on Friday, Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. at WCA. Eric Hann plays bass and Dee Hemingway is a powerful vocal performer who enjoy a wide following. Admission is by sliding scale, $5 to $10.

At any of the WCA classes and events in February, you can enjoy the Figuratively Speaking exhibit from StewART Studio in Arcata featuring artists with a variety of backgrounds from students to professors.

Call (707) 677-9493 or find Westhaven Center for the Arts on Facebook to find out the latest offerings.

Author Naomi Silvertree

Trinidad’s Naomi Silvertree has written The Silvertree Story Book. She will present a book signing at Blake’s Books, 2005 Central Ave. in McKinleyville, on Friday, Feb. 19 from 6 to 8 p.m. during McKinleyville Arts Night.

Trinidad Head Lighthouse

Bureau of Land Management Interpretive Specialist Leisyka Parrott counted over 400 visitors at the 1871 lighthouse, which opened for four hours on Sunday, Jan. 31. Lines to go up into the lighthouse on a bright, sunny day were long, but the crowds were patient and enjoyed the performance by Julie Clark portraying Mrs. Fred Harrington, lighthouse keeper from 1888-1916, and the interpretation by BLM and Trinidad Museum volunteers. Visitors included two exchange teachers from Mexico and a large family from Brazil who had never before been to the North Coast.

Museum docent Jim Webb was on duty at the museum and showed many of the lighthouse visitors the 1940s Fresnel lens on permanent loan from the U.S. Coast Guard, which was replaced by the LED lamp in 2013. The first oil lantern can be seen in the Trinidad Memorial Lighthouse on Edwards Street along with the 4,000 lb. brass fog bell which was installed on Trinidad Head in 1898.

Leisyka said the next open house will be in June on Fish Festival Day. Watch for announcements.

CR provides on-campus veterans’ services

COLLEGE OF THE REDWOODS

EUREKA – College of the Redwoods will have a representative from the Eureka VA Outpatient Clinic on campus beginning this spring semester. Forest Harpham is the new VA Student Veteran Health Program Liaison who will be on campus to assist student veterans attending CR.

College of the Redwood’s interim president, Keith Snow-Flamer, was thrilled with the news. “As a Marine Corps veteran I can attest to the importance of making sure we have support services for the remarkable men and women who have served our country and are now a part of our college community,” he said.

As the new VA student veteran health program liaison, Harpham will provide education about VA health benefits and services, VA health enrollment assistance, case-management, mental health counseling, and outreach/education to students and faculty about veteran related issues.

Harpham has been living in the Humboldt area since 1999. She has a master’s degree from HSU, has worked for the HSU Counseling Center, and has completed a fellowship program with the VA. She will be dividing her work week between CR and the VA Community Based Outpatient Clinic in downtown Eureka.

“I will be helping veterans on campus to assess their health needs, refer them to the appropriate specialist, and also provide some health services here on campus,” said Harpham. “I am also enthusiastic about the guest speakers that we will be bringing to campus to discuss a variety of student veteran needs.”

Harpham can be reached by email at forest.harpham@va.gov.

Get your ashes to go on the Plaza

ST. ALBAN’S EPISCOPAL CHURCH

ARCATA PLAZA – St. Alban’s Episcopal Church takes Ash Wednesday to the Arcata Plaza today, Feb. 10 from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., with “Ashes to Go,” a new approach to a centuries-old Christian tradition.

St. Alban’s Episcopal Church is part of a new nationwide movement that has clergy and lay people visiting transit stops, street corners, coffee shops and college campuses to mark the foreheads of interested passersby with ashes and invite them to repent of past wrongdoing and seek forgiveness and renewal.

“Lent comes from the word for lengthening of days as we head into spring,” said the Reverend Sara Potter of St. Alban’s Episcopal Church. “In the life of the church, this is a season of spiritual renewal, marked by repentance or change, in the face of our mortality. The ashes of Ash Wednesday are a sign of our mortality and our intention to seek renewal and a changed direction Godward.v Ashes to Go is a way to mark that new beginning publically and in a way that connects the traditions of faith with everyday life.”

St. Alban’s welcomes LGBTB people. Links to other activities and programs may be found at saintalban-sarcata.org. For more information about Ashes to Go on the Arcata Plaza contact St. Alban’s Episcopal Church at (707) 822-4102 or officesec@stalban-sarcata.org.

BOARD LEADERSHIP ROUNDTABLE The Northern California Association of Nonprofits (NorCAN) invites the public to February’s Board Leadership Roundtable with Bobbie Good and Byrd Lochtie. This event, which is geared toward board members and those who work with them, is on Tuesday, Feb. 16 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the Multi-Generational Center, 2280 Newburg Rd. in Fortuna. This month’s topic is “Sharing Workload and Engaging Community Through Committees.” Nonprofit boards, especially in small organizations, need to rely on committees to get the work done. Learn which committees your board should have, how they should operate, and when they should report to the board. This event will be conducted in English with simultaneous Spanish interpretation. Admission is $15/$10 for NorCAN members, and three scholarship registrations at $5 are available. (707) 442-2993, norcan@hafoundation.org, northerncalifornianonprofits.org

IS THE FIRST OFFER THE BEST?

Your home has been listed for just a few days, and your Realtor calls with great news. The people who looked at the house last night have come in with an offer to buy it! When the agents arrive to present the offer, you are excited and nervous. As they explain the price and terms, however, you feel that the price is a little too low and that the offer contains some terms that will be either expensive or inconvenient for you to meet. Should you respond to the offer by opening negotiations, or wait for something better? If the offer is reasonably close to your asking price, it doesn't hurt to try to work it out!

Often, the first offer to come in is the best one. When a house is fresh on the market, there is usually a rush of activity and the buyers who see it during the first few days are those most likely to be the most interested. If you are fortunate enough to get an offer right away, you will probably be better off in the long run if you accept it or try to work out a compromise.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling real estate, call Joanie Frederick, Broker, Azalea Realty, (707) 362-0144, or check out our website at www.azalearealty.com.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Deputy finds rape victim in Crannell

• Saturday, January 23 11:11 a.m. Ann Albright was in a vehicle and allegedly ramming it into another vehicle on Patrick's Point Drive in Trinidad. When deputies arrived, Albright showed signs of intoxication. She told deputies that she wasn't ramming the vehicle; it was her boyfriend who was doing so. But the hood on her boyfriend's car was cold, while the hood on Albright's car was warm. Deputies determined that she was being less than truthful. She was booked into the county jail on suspicion of public intoxication and violating the terms of her probation.

11:45 p.m. A deputy was conducting a vehicle investigation on the frontage road in Crannell, located between McKinleyville and Westhaven, when he heard someone yelling for help in the bushes nearby. As the deputy walked into the wooded area, he could see clothing items, a cellphone and keys on the ground. In a thick patch of berry briars, the deputy found a completely naked man who was covered with scratches and seemed to be under the influence of drugs or alcohol. The man said that earlier in the evening he had picked up two male hitchhikers. They provided him with an alcoholic beverage, and after that he could not remember anything. As the victim became more lucid, he said he thought he may have been raped. A medical test confirmed that there were signs of trauma. The incident is under investigation.

• Sunday, January 24, 4:48 p.m. Deputies pulled over a vehicle on the south end of McKinleyville after a vehicle pursuit. When the car stopped, Joshua Wentworth jumped out and started running. He ran across both the southbound and northbound lanes of U.S. Highway 101, and made his way to a brushy area on North Bank Road. Deputies cornered him there and took him into custody. He was booked into the county jail on suspicion of resisting arrest.

10:21 p.m. Deputies spotted Esteban Arredondo-Wilson on Scenic Drive near Trinidad and searched him, as is allowed under the terms of his probation. They found a glass pipe with burned white residue, consistent with meth smoking, a hypodermic syringe, .38 grams of meth and a double-edged dagger in a sheath. Arredondo-Wilson was booked into the county jail for carrying a concealed weapon, possession of a controlled substance and paraphernalia and violating probation.

• Tuesday, January 26, 12:46 a.m. At the Chevron Station in Trinidad, Joseph Hernandez and two passengers were sitting in a vehicle after hours and not buying any gas. A deputy went to investigate why the car was parked at the Chevron, but Hernandez was uncooperative. He failed to hand over a driver's license or show the deputy the vehicle's registration. He was also acting like a Nervous Nellie. A records check of the vehicle revealed that it was unregistered and displaying fake registration tabs, which is a felony. When deputies went to detain Hernandez, he was uncooperative and allegedly fought with the officers. During a search of the car, deputies found a loaded Ruger .22 handgun with its serial number scratched off, additional ammunition, several baggies of processed bud, a rifle and a shotgun. Hernandez was booked into the county jail on suspicion of possession of a controlled substance while armed with a loaded firearm, being a felon in possession of ammunition, resisting arrest, displaying false registration tabs, possession of marijuana and concealing a weapon in a vehicle, transporting marijuana in a vehicle and removing a serial number from a firearm.

12:25 p.m. A homeless female who drives a light blue Buick LeSabre is suspected of breaking into an unoccupied duplex on Murray Road in McKinleyville and stealing two circular saws. The alleged thief stayed overnight in the duplex, which is being remodeled. To add insult to injury, the she also took a dump in the house.

5:24 p.m. William Osborne's wife came home late in the evening, which made him mad, so he grabbed a mixing bowl and allegedly assaulted her with it, causing severe pain. The woman then threw a knife at Osborne, and he left the house. The next day she went to Mad River Community Hospital to get treatment for her injuries. A warrant has been issued for Osborne's arrest on suspicion of domestic violence and violation of probation.

6:18 p.m. A patient at Mad River Community Hospital was treated for a gunshot wound to the buttock. The victim claimed that the wound was from an accident that happened in Mendocino County where he was skeet shooting with friends. He was at the hospital because the wound wasn't healing properly.

• Wednesday, January 27 5:13 a.m. On Norton Road near the Beau Pre Golf Course in McKinleyville, a white Jeep was parked on somebody's lawn. Deputies arrived and found two occupants in the vehicle, Tawny Renee Owens, who was passed out in the front seat, and a 2-year-old child, who was in a child safety seat in the back seat. Deputies had trouble rousing Owens. When she emerged from the fog of the substances pulsing through her blood, her speech was slurred and she had trouble forming words. She faded in and out of consciousness and was unable to provide deputies with any information about the child in the back seat other than a first name. Deputies searched the vehicle and found what appeared to be marijuana hash oil, buds and a glass pipe. There was no food or water or extra clothing for the child. Owens was booked into the county jail on suspicion of willful cruelty to a child, possession of concentrated cannabis, public intoxication and giving false identification to a police officer. The Jeep was towed.

Baltzley behind bars

HUMBOLDT COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

EUREKA – On Wednesday, Feb. 3 at approximately 11:08 p.m., a Humboldt County sheriff's sergeant was on patrol searching for warrant suspect Donovan Baltzley.

Baltzley is known to drive a dark green Honda Civic. The sergeant located a dark green Honda Civic parked on Spring Street in Eureka and confirmed this vehicle was registered to Baltzley. Baltzley was observed getting into his vehicle and driving away. The sergeant followed from a safe distance, and additional deputies responded. After driving a few blocks, Baltzley pulled his vehicle over and surrendered without the sergeant activating lights and sirens.

Deputies located suspected heroin and drug paraphernalia on Baltzley's person. Baltzley was arrested for his Post Release Community Supervision (PRCS) warrant; and also for his fresh warrants which included giving false identification to a peace officer, resisting arrest, being a felon in possession of a firearm, possession of a controlled substance; possession of a narcotic controlled substance, and possession of controlled substance paraphernalia. He was transported to the Humboldt County Correctional Facility and booked on the above charges.

Arcata Fire awarded for communication upgrades

ARCATA FIRE DISTRICT

SACRAMENTO – On Jan. 20, Assistant Chief Sean Campbell traveled to Sacramento on behalf of the Arcata Fire District to accept the CalFire Partnership Award. This award was presented to the Arcata Fire District for its assistance in upgrading and improving the communication infrastructure for dispatch and radio communications.

Arcata Fire District was awarded a Federal Emergency Management Agency grant for the upgrade of the Humboldt County Local Government fire communications network. The grant objectives were to replace aging equipment at mountain top repeater sites, purchase two portable repeaters and four dispatch consoles, and improve the countywide systems for federal narrow banding.

The collaborative partnership has led to a modernized Emergency Command Center as well as a highly upgraded countywide fire communication net.

"The modernization and well-engineered system will provide for improved reliability. Additionally, public and first responder safety will be vastly improved by providing a more reliable communication system now and well into the future," stated CalFire Unit Chief Hugh Scanlon.

Baby on life support sits idly by as tensions mount

• Monday, January 18 9:56 a.m. It was bad enough that guests occupying rooms 106 and 107 at a Valley West motel of sorts got into a physical fight outside their rooms. Unfortunately, a baby said to be "on life support" in one of the rooms wasn't exactly part of the solution, being of no help whatsoever in resolving things. The disputants were last reported throwing things at each other.

11:47 p.m. Men outside a Fourth Street business argued in multimedia fashion, variously thumping, stomping, throwing and raging. A woman, possibly with an infant, was reported in a nearby apartment somehow related to the clash.

4:17 p.m. Unopened packages of needles were found near an F Street variety store, and turned over to police.

• Tuesday, January 19 9:31 a.m. A man sold his truck to someone, who sold it to someone else. But the truck remained registered in the original owner's name, so when it started getting traffic tickets in Arcata, they were sent to him.

12:21 p.m. A man's truck was burgled on 15th Street. Taken was a gym bag containing a wood roller, exercise bands, a package of drill bits, a small screwdriver, a reusable cloth trash bag and a rubber dog toy.

1:13 p.m. Non-gentlemen smoked cigarettes outside a dumbass-beleaguered H Street shop, heroically blowing the carcinogenic exhaust into the face of a small child one was holding.

4:03 p.m. A German shepherd was reported tethered to a Samoa Boulevard tree for more than an hour, which must have been really boring for the poor dog. It was gone when police arrived.

4:36 p.m. A German shepherd was reported tethered out front of a G Street laundromat. A woman said it lunged at her, forcing her out into the street. It was gone when police arrived.

5:46 p.m. A man in his fifties with a gray ponytail was seen buying a bottle of booze for a youth on a skateboard at an Alliance Road mini-mart.

• Wednesday, January 20 12:48 p.m. A mountain bike was stolen from a Stromberg Avenue residence.

• Thursday, January 21 11:57 a.m. A man with shoulder-length hair, a hoodie pulled up over his head and a camouflage backpack twice came into a Plaza bank, behaving in a strange and disquieting manner. At one point, he leaned over the counter and yelled "Check!" while pointing at each teller individually. He left and was last seen entering an historic Plaza storehouse, but there the trail went cold.

4:01 p.m. A woman came to the police department saying that her daughter had mistakenly been identified as a suspect by Barstow Police and arrested. They'd directed her to go to her local PD and clear things up. She did, and was arrested.

4:03 p.m. A Fickle Hill Road resident never received paychecks sent to her home. They were stolen, altered and cashed.

8:37 p.m. "Fight me! Fight me! Someone fight me!" exclaimed a man at Baldwin Street and Grant Avenue.

8:46 p.m. Still in search of a willing combatant, Fight Me Guy made his way over to Davis Way and Hilfiker Drive, where he inspired another call to police.

Cat burglar steals dog

HUMBOLDT COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

McKINLEYVILLE – On Tuesday, Feb. 2 at about 8:30 a.m., deputies responded to the Humboldt County Animal Shelter in McKinleyville to investigate a burglary.

Animal shelter attendants noticed one of the dogs in the shelter was missing. Deputies discovered the burglary occurred at about 10 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 1, after the shelter was closed.

The suspect maneuvered over a perimeter wall to gain entry. There were footprints leading to the stolen dog's kennel, and the lock to the kennel was found undone, not broken. There is video surveillance of the break-in, and deputies are reviewing

HOT DOG This dog, named Felony, was stolen from the shelter.

OBITUARY

James Steven Reinhold

November 20, 1954 – February 16, 2015

James Steven Reinhold, a 1976 Humboldt State University Journalism Department graduate, has left this world. His IBM Selectric keys, quick and acerbic witty one-liners and comebacks have forever been silenced.

James will be remembered by many as deeply involved in local volunteering and grassroots political organizing in 1970s Arcata and Humboldt County campaigns. He himself ran his own "Gonzo" campaign for Humboldt County Sheriff in about 1978.

James was an active player and team captain on local softball fields, and frequently held court for discussions of current events at several favorite taverns from Orick to Garberville. He moved to the Missouri Ozarks in 1982, but Humboldt, and especially Arcata, were never far from his thoughts.

James is survived by his wife Susan, daughter Jesse Reinhold-Galve (Miguel); granddaughter Alli Galve; daughter Agatha Reinhold (Travis Amato); mother, Helyn Reinhold; two sisters, Joan England and Ann O'Rourke; and two brothers, Thomas Reinhold and John Reinhold. James is also survived by his many acquaintances and lifelong friends, several who reside in Humboldt County, who miss him and even miss his random, rambling late night phone calls, every day.

His consistent farewell was the single phrase, "Keep Smiling." So, to you, James, we tip our hats and say, wherever you are, "Keep Smiling!"

A local celebration of James' life is being planned later this spring. For more information, contact Phylis Geller at (707) 822-6145.

of HUMBOLDT.

The Petition for Probate requests that: DONALD E. MCCOWN be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take any actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:

Date: February 25, 2016
Time: 2:00 PM
Dept.: 8

Address of court: Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, CA, 95501.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Sequoia Park Zoo takes on prickly porcupine issues

SEQUOIA PARK ZOO

EUREKA — Sequoia Park Zoo hosts a lecture titled “North American porcupine ecology in a coastal dune forest” by Tim Bean, assistant professor in the Department of Wildlife at Humboldt State University and Cara Appel, graduate student at HSU, today, Feb. 10 at 7 p.m.

This past summer, Tolowa Dunes State Park lab started studying this enigmatic species to understand diet and movement in different seasons. This talk will cover their first year of research on the “old man of the woods” in a unique coastal dune forest on the edge of the continent.

The lecture will be held in Sequoia Park Zoo’s Flamingo Room and is free and open to the public. A reception will be held 30 minutes prior to start of the lecture.

Sequoia Park Zoo’s Conservation Advisory Committee is pleased to highlight work that is supported by the zoo’s conservation grant program. “It’s impressive that the zoo can provide this support for field-based wildlife conservation while at the same time helping to train the next generation of conservation biologists, by supporting HSU students and projects,” says Micaela Gunther, professor in the department of Wildlife at Humboldt State University, and member of the Zoo Conservation Advisory Committee.

Sequoia Park Zoo’s Conservation Advisory Committee hosts a series of evening lectures by experts on various wildlife conservation issues every winter season. The 2015-2016 lecture series continues with lectures on March 9 and April 20. sequoiaparkzoo.net, (707) 442-5649

WHO'S HOO The Great Grey Owl, a state endangered species sighted at Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park, is only the second confirmed sighting in Humboldt County. It has attracted visitors from all over to see it perching and foraging along the Newton B. Drury Parkway. Authorities ask that spectators slow down for the low-flying owl along the parkway.
